FEEDING THE BIRD

While it is true that the winter birds have feeding habits which render them ordinarily proof against a heavy fall of snow, there are few who will not appreciate assistance. Without pretending to the niceties of this winter's ornithological record in this region, it is enough to remark that our list of winter birds is ordinarily a surprisingly long one. Besides the cedar waxwing the bluebird and the robin, one is not unlikely to encounter—or hear—a purple finch, the chickadee, the white-breasted nuthatch, the gold-finch, and even the song sparrow, while among our occasional visitors are the redpoll, the American crossbill, the white-throat, the junco or snowbird, the winter wren, the golden-crowned kinglet and the brown creepers. And others besides, others who constitute the surprises of the season. Altogether the practice proposed has its very attractive features and the school children in particular should get lots of pleasure therefrom.—Chicago Evening Post.

Miss Jewell Ferguson is very ill with nervous trouble.
